Talk is Cheap.

And so are fine clothing, boots shoes, hats and gentlemen's and boys fine furnishing goods, if you go to the right place to get them. This is a mighty important point, for some people who assert that they sell cheap do nothing of the kind. I do not boast when I say that I defy competition in price in anything in my line. Besides this I have only one price. I have no preferred customers. Everybody is treated alike at my establishment. My stock is the largest and most complete ever offered in any part of this State. Everything I have is new. No old, musty and out-of-date goods can be found on my shelves. I receive daily by rail and express the latest and best goods, which are obtained at first hand and sold at prices below those now prevailing in New York and Chicago. Let the people come and judge of my prices and examine my stock before going into those humbugging, cheap-john shops, in which they drum into the ear of the customer that they sell at cost and even below cost. Anybody with common sense must know that they lie. No storekeeper sells goods for the fun of the thing. I make a profit on everything I sell, as every honest merchant does, and don't print foolish falsehoods in the vain hope of deceiving the public. One must make a profit to live. I particularly call attention to my full stock of fancy underwear, such as is kept nowhere else in Reno. This class of goods form one of my specialties. Remember the place. "Verbum Sapientis."

When the Army of the Potomac under Gen. McClellan was making its famous march "on to Richmond," the newspapers throughout the land vied with each other in frantic efforts to make a great noise about it, and really for a time made the whole world believe that the exploits of said general and his army were about the only enterprises on foot. Meanwhile General Grant in his quiet and persevering way was "pushing things" in another quarter and accomplishing what he was after. So likewise, while other barbers in Reno are making a furor in the papers about their commodious rooms, elegant outfits, neat shaving, shampooing, etc., etc., it should not be forgotten that Lee "will live," and maintains his business in his usual quiet and unostentatious way, next door east of Fogg's meat market, Commercial Row, where he will be happy to greet all his old patrons and new ones as well, trusting in his ability to attend to all their wants in the "tonorial" line in a prompt and satisfactory manner.

The scarcity of diamonds, gold and silver, and the difficulties met with in securing them, is a sure indication of their value. Thus it is with a valuable medicine: Dr. Aug. Kaiser's celebrated German Pulmonic Elixir, through the jealousy of rivals, has met with the most bitter opposition, and apparently almost insurmountable obstacles have been thrown in its way; but its opponents might as well try to change the course of the sun, sweep back the ocean with a broom, or put out a prairie fire with a tear. For the cure of Throat and Lung diseases, such as Coughs, Colds, Consumption and Bronchial Affections it is unequalled. Its cures are truly magical. Ask your druggists, OZBURN & SNOOKMAN, for it. The genuine bears the Prussian Coat of Arms, the fac-simile signature of Dr. Aug. Kaiser, and has his name blown on every 70-cent bottle. Trial bottle, 25 cents. served

A CONJURUM.—"You are a mile, sir," said an Irishman to his son. "And you are my father, sir," was the quick reply, "and it is no use to deny the relationship." The old gentleman attempted to assume a severe look, but a faint smile stole over his face, and to reward the wit of his son, went to St. N. Davidson's Jewelry Store and selected one of the finest Watches and Chains for him as a Christmas present. They both were made happy, as the son returned the compliment again.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

According to the New York Graph Senator Jones, of Nevada, has become a convert of the fast dollar doctrine, which, as we understand it, is that the fast or declaration of the government that a piece of paper is a dollar, makes it worth a dollar, and that there is no necessity for ever redeeming it in gold or silver. In other words, the government is possessed of so much higher power than the citizen, and can create values out of nothing. When Senator Jones will grasp himself firmly with both hands by the back of his trousers, and lift himself two feet from the ground, we will join him in his new theory. The principle is the same.—Bodie Standard.

We have seen this same report concerning Senator Jones recently and sincerely hope that it is not true. The Standard describes the flat idea correctly. The government's fiat can't turn a block of wood into a dollar simply by calling it a dollar. The fiat of the Almighty turned water into wine, but congress isn't the Almighty.

The plague, the spread of which the European powers are now trying to prevent is an aggravated malignant fever, which, in certain portions of the extreme East, always prevails more or less, and is liable to become a terrible epidemic. Egypt, Syria and the two Turkeys are subject to its ravages, the former particularly. Now and then, however, as in the present instance, it breaks over the ordinary boundaries and sweeps far and wide. During the middle ages it frequently invaded northern and central Europe, and there is every reason to believe that the "black death" which made such awful havoc in the fourteenth century, was the same disease under a different name.

A Washington dispatch gives the following as the reason why Christianity accepted the Peru mission: Christianity has two grown sons who have caused him great trouble through their dissipated habits. Mrs. Christianity has refused to go back to Lansing and live in his house, where these boys were allowed to come. Life at Washington and the malaria of the Capital have combined with domestic worries to undermine the senator's health. He thinks by going out of the country entirely he will escape his domestic annoyances, and at the same time find a change of climate that will do him good.

Numerous complaints are being made of the depredations by wood pirates. A giant powder cartridge judiciously bestowed in the wood piles, might help to bring the guilty parties to a realizing sense of their meanness.—Tucuman Times-Review.

The reckless disregard of personal consequences must cause every friend of the F. R. man to tremble with apprehension.

The San Francisco Post states it briefly: "Chinese serfs may be sent all over the country to work for their foreign owners, under protection of a treaty. But the constitution of our country does not prevent a free Caucasian citizen being put in jail as a tramp if he goes from one state to another in search of work."

The leading papers of the East have evidently not yet learned the A B C of the Chinese question. Their utterances on the anti-immigration bill which has passed the house show ignorance, arrogance and rage in about equal proportions.

The San Francisco Post's expounder of the obvious draws the back of his hand across his lips and with a grant of satiety writes this:

The moonkeeper who gives his customers a hearty lunch with a five-cent glass of lager beer is a formidable opponent to the most eloquent temperance lecturer.

There are thirty more daily and 307 more weekly papers in existence in the United States than there were a year ago, notwithstanding a large number of consolidations.

Drunkenness and Sabbath desecration, and fraud and dishonesty in business dealings. These are bringing down upon our country the displeasure of heaven, and spreading crime and sorrow through our land."

California cacti are one of the new articles from which paper is made, and a process has been patented in Germany by a Mr. Nordlinger, of Stuttgart, for rendering the fibre of the hop plant sufficiently tractable for the purpose. The stems and other parts of the plant are boiled in water and soap for three-quarters of an hour, thoroughly washed, and then again boiled in very much diluted acetic acid. The fibres are then washed, dried, and combed, and are ready for working.

A locomotive, perhaps the largest ever made, is now en route for work on the long, heavy grade on the Rocky mountains of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad. It has ten wheels of paper, with steel tires, and the fire-box is ten feet long. When in working order it weighs 118,000 pounds. Its weight is so great that the Western roads won't let it go over bridges, and it will have therefore to be dismantled. It ran, however, over all the bridges of the Pennsylvania road.

The Cove What Lost.

[Virginia Stage, Jan. 30.] Billy Lynn, "the cove what lost," left for Eureka on the passenger train last night, and a Stage reporter but-tolned him for a minute at the depot. Although a tough and wiry boy, capable of enduring much bodily punishment, Billy has a whole-souled, generous and sensitive disposition, and keenly feels the "whips and scorns" he has been subjected to since the late glove-fight at the hands of his former friends and backers. Poor fellow, we couldn't help but pity him last night as he left for home—his face black and bruised, his pockets empty, and but one solitary friend about as poor as himself, to bid him good-by. Had fortune favored him, the depot would have been too small for the crowd who would have given him a good "send off." The only substantial friend the unlucky man had was Jack Hallinan, his adversary in the contest. With a spirit of magnanimity for which our Jack is noted, he handed Lynn $50 to procure a railroad ticket. Lynn acknowledges that he acted very foolish during the fight, that he underrated his opponent and failed to improve whatever advantages he may have had; but says he wished to prolong the fight in order to show spectators that he was game and had unlimited endurance. When both his eyes were closed, however, he says that all he could see was his mistake. Mike Donovan's uncharitable remarks about his lack of "sand" and "leather," he says, hurt worse than bodily punishment. Lynn feels grateful to Hallinan and says if he succeeds in getting work at Eureka, Jack shall shortly be repaid and Donovan recompensed for time and trouble in training him.

Is This a Boston Fashion?

There is in my hands a letter from a man of affairs in this city, and its topic is low-paid female labor. There is no red-hot gridiron here, otherwise I should like to grill upon it in a public presence the man who suggested infamy to a girl as means of increasing her wages behind the counter. You would like to bribe there any man doing that. I suppose the case was a great exception; but have excellent evidence that there is no exaggeration what I am about to read to you. This is not an anonymous letter, but the writer who signs it with his own full name is recorded in the directory of the city to which he belongs, and his occupation mentioned: "A young lady, whose family became reduced in worldly circumstances, felt that she must try and do something for herself, and therefore applied to a large retail dry-goods house for a situation." "Yes," said the proprietor, we will take you; your salary will be—naming the price. "Oh, sir," said she, "I can't live upon that." "I understand you Miss," was the reply. "Several of these girls do not live upon what we pay them. Do you see that young lady there? We pay her just what I offer you; a young man pays her the rest." "I wish the gridiron were here for the lapping." "I know whereof I affirm," continues the writer, whose letter aroused an indignation I dare not express here; "and I think that when it comes to this matter goes a step beyond low wages." This is simply an illustration of one effect of low wages. "Please remember that this young woman was not only a person of high character and good family, but also a perfect stranger to this merchant."—Rev. Joseph Cook.

Irish Belles.

[Baltimore Sun, Dublin letter.] An Irish girl of the world—and by no means less so imply worldly—can say more "soft nothings" and leave an enchanting impression that "strong somethings" were ment than any girl on North Charles street. There is an inductive process in the parleying of the Dublin belle that is susceptible of doing what Paddy's gun had the unique ability of accomplishing. Her jokes shoot round one corner just in time to meet her pathos coming round the other, and then occurs such an amazing and charming conception that you are like the man with "Hobson's choice." Her direct sallies of wit and her moods, her sympathetic circles, like the first book of Euclid, with all the angles thrown out, not only interest but charm your attention. I am sure you are from Dublin.

ORDERED CLERGYMAN.

variation the Result of Attempting to "French Christ" at $400 a Year.

[Montreal Witness, Jan. 3.] The Mail of Wednesday refers to a case which, within the last few days, has stirred church of England circles in this city to the depths, and redely awakened them to the fact that while they, in common with other religious sects, have been building palaces in which to worship their God, at least one administrator of spiritual food has actually died in their midst from starvation. The case referred to is that of the Rev. W. F. Checkley, assistant minister of St. Paul's church, Bloor street, who died on Friday last, it was said of typhoid fever, but really from sheer want. A few years ago he was engaged by the Bloor street congregation at a salary of $800, but the congregation found they could only pay half that amount, and on $400 per annum Mr. Checkley had to keep alive himself and his own family of five or six children, including an adult son, who some time ago has his hand amputated, two children of a dead brother and an invalid sister. Nothing was known of the extreme poverty of the family until Mr. Checkley's death, when it was ascertained that the household had actually been existing for two years past on almost bread alone. But during that time had not been in the house, and the taste of meat was almost forgotten. Mr. Checkley was of a plucky, noble disposition, and always had a joke for everybody. One day recently he was met by a brother clergyman, who remarked that he looked terribly cold, and asked where his overcoat was. Mr. Checkley, in joking manner, replied that he had got one, and in this way he warned off any suspicion as to the real state of his family affairs. As soon as the real state of things became known to the neighbors and the congregation of St. Paul's offered assistance in abundance, and probably a fund will now be raised for settlement on the bereaved widow and her family. The case was referred to last Sunday from the pulpit in a couple of Episcopal churches. The Mail says it has heard of clergymen throwing up their charges in Toronto because they could not get their stipends paid, and trusting themselves in preference to the charities of the backwoods. At the present moment, it says, it knows of pastors of fashionable congregations in the city whose salaries are heavily in arrears. Nearly all our churches are scrambling along, living from hand to mouth, steeped to the lips in debt, and very proud if they can in any fraction pay their own way. Mr. Checkley, who was fifty-four when he died, it should be added, spent nearly his whole life in the ministerial ranks in Ontario.

Two Remarkable Men of Letters.

Between four and five years ago two remarkable men of letters met by chance at the door of the London library. They were almost life-long friends, but had not seen each other for some time. In appearance they presented a striking contrast. One, whose iron gray hair nearly reached his shoulders, was bent and feeble; the other, with his naturally florid face set off by thick white whiskers and mustaches, seemed to have a long lease of life. "Lewes," exclaimed the second, "can it be you? My junior by five or six years, you ought to be at least as well as I am." "Cela depend, my dear Oxenford," was the reply. Not long afterward the apparently robust man was seized with what proved to be a fatal disease, and his prematurely aged friend has now joined him in the grave. Those who are acquainted with the story of George Henry Lewes' early struggles may perceive that "cela depend" a certain mournful significance, a faint echo of the past. Less fortunate than Oxenford, he received from his parents nothing more than a fairly liberal education, and at the age of 18 or 19 found himself dependent upon his own exertions for a livelihood. For many years he was familiar with poverty, whether as the mercantile clerk in the city, as the self-supporting student at the Gorman university, or as the unrecognized journalist and essayist. In order to procure the books he wanted, to dress in a becoming manner, and to join the weekly gatherings at the Fielding club—gatherings at which Thackeray, Oxenford, Jerrold, and the present music critic of the Times were the principal figures—he had to deny himself many of the necessities of existence. Fame at length marked him for her own; but in the meantime his constitution had been incurably impaired by want and intense application, and had it not been for the devotion of his gifted wife, the authoress of "Romola" and "Daniel Deronda," he might not have lived so long as he did.

Proposed Migration of Blacks.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Louisiana letters represent a very earnest feeling among leading blacks favoring migration to other parts of the country where they can vote. Meetings had been held and a general mass meeting is proposed. A letter signed by a prominent colored citizen of Louisiana says they find the social prejudices of the community paramount to the federal statutes, and the more vigorously the colored citizen remonstrates by ballot the greater the disfavor in which he stands. Their transfer to any section of the Union in which are zealously maintained the civil and political rights of all, presents an advantage to themselves; to the section whose voting forces they would augment, and to the government, and no disadvantage to the South.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The Sun says: The delay in Edison's application of electric light to general uses of illumination affords no small consolation to officers of the gas companies and holders of gas stock. Their property has again appreciated in value.

Prisoners Captured.

PORTLAND, Or., Jan. 29.—Two men confined in the Oregon City jail escaped Monday. One man, named Bennett, was arrested for cutting a Chinaman, and the other is an old state prison convict named John McKern, who was confined for a burglary committed in Clackamas county. The telegraph operator gave chase, shooting Bennett through the sleeve at the first fire and splitting an apple in the pocket at the second shot, when the prisoners threw up their hands and surrendered.
